1. // Load all Ajax behaviors specified in the settings.
2. // Bind Ajax behaviors to all items showing the class.
3. // Clicked links look better with the throbber than the progress bar.
4. // For anchor tags, these will go to the target of the anchor rather
5. // than the usual location.
6. // This class means to submit the form to the action using Ajax.
7. // Ajax submits specified in this manner automatically submit to the
8. // normal form action.
9. // Form submit button clicks need to tell the form what was clicked so
10. // it gets passed in the POST request.
11. // Form buttons use the 'click' event rather than mousedown.
12. // Clicked form buttons look better with the throbber than the progress bar.
13. // Replacing 'nojs' with 'ajax' in the URL allows for an easy method to let
14. // the server detect when it needs to degrade gracefully.
15. // There are five scenarios to check for:
16. // 1. /nojs/
17. // 2. /nojs$ - The end of a URL string.
18. // 3. /nojs? - Followed by a query (with clean URLs enabled).
19. // E.g.: path/nojs?destination=foobar
20. // 4. /nojs& - Followed by a query (without clean URLs enabled).
21. // E.g.: ?q=path/nojs&destination=foobar
22. // 5. /nojs# - Followed by a fragment.
23. // E.g.: path/nojs#myfragment

24. // If there isn't a form, jQuery.ajax() will be used instead, allowing us to
25. // bind Ajax to links as well.
26. // Set the options for the ajaxSubmit function.
27. // The 'this' variable will not persist inside of the options object.
28. // Sanity check for browser support (object expected).
29. // When using iFrame uploads, responses must be returned as a string.
30. // Bind the ajaxSubmit function to the element event.
31. // If necessary, enable keyboard submission so that Ajax behaviors
32. // can be triggered through keyboard input as well as e.g. a mousedown
33. // action.
34. // If necessary, prevent the browser default action of an additional event.
35. // For example, prevent the browser default action of a click, even if the
36. // AJAX behavior binds to mousedown.
37. // Create a synonym for this to reduce code confusion.
38. // Detect enter key and space bar and allow the standard response for them,
39. // except for form elements of type 'text' and 'textarea', where the
40. // spacebar activation causes inappropriate activation if #ajax['keypress'] is
41. // TRUE. On a text-type widget a space should always be a space.
42. // Create a synonym for this to reduce code confusion.
43. // Do not perform another ajax command if one is already in progress.
44. // If setClick is set, we must set this to ensure that the button's
45. // value is passed.
46. // Mark the clicked button. 'form.clk' is a special variable for
47. // ajaxSubmit that tells the system which element got clicked to
48. // trigger the submit. Without it there would be no 'op' or
49. // equivalent.
50. // Unset the ajax.ajaxing flag here because it won't be unset during
51. // the complete response.
52. // For radio/checkbox, allow the default event. On IE, this means letting
53. // it actually check the box.
54. // Allow detaching behaviors to update field values before collecting them.
55. // This is only needed when field values are added to the POST data, so only
56. // when there is a form such that this.form.ajaxSubmit() is used instead of
57. // $.ajax(). When there is no form and $.ajax() is used, beforeSerialize()
58. // isn't called, but don't rely on that: explicitly check this.form.
59. // Prevent duplicate HTML ids in the returned markup.
60. // @see drupal_html_id()
61. // Allow Drupal to return new JavaScript and CSS files to load without

62. // returning the ones already loaded.
63. // @see ajax_base_page_theme()
64. // @see drupal_get_css()
65. // @see drupal_get_js()
66. // This function is left empty to make it simple to override for modules
67. // that wish to add functionality here.
68. // For forms without file inputs, the jQuery Form plugin serializes the form
69. // values, and then calls jQuery's $.ajax() function, which invokes this
70. // handler. In this circumstance, options.extraData is never used. For forms
71. // with file inputs, the jQuery Form plugin uses the browser's normal form
72. // submission mechanism, but captures the response in a hidden IFRAME. In this
73. // circumstance, it calls this handler first, and then appends hidden fields
74. // to the form to submit the values in options.extraData. There is no simple
75. // way to know which submission mechanism will be used, so we add to extraData
76. // regardless, and allow it to be ignored in the former case.
77. // Let the server know when the IFRAME submission mechanism is used. The
78. // server can use this information to wrap the JSON response in a TEXTAREA,
79. // as per http://jquery.malsup.com/form/#file-upload.
80. // The triggering element is about to be disabled (see below), but if it
81. // contains a value (e.g., a checkbox, textfield, select, etc.), ensure that
82. // value is included in the submission. As per above, submissions that use
83. // $.ajax() are already serialized prior to the element being disabled, so
84. // this is only needed for IFRAME submissions.
85. // Disable the element that received the change to prevent user interface
86. // interaction while the Ajax request is in progress. ajax.ajaxing prevents
87. // the element from triggering a new request, but does not prevent the user
88. // from changing its value.
89. // Insert progressbar or throbber.
90. // Remove the progress element.
91. // Reattach behaviors, if they were detached in beforeSerialize(). The
92. // attachBehaviors() called on the new content from processing the response
93. // commands is not sufficient, because behaviors from the entire form need
94. // to be reattached.
95. // Remove any response-specific settings so they don't get used on the next
96. // call by mistake.
97. // Remove the progress element.
98. // Undo hide.
99. // Re-enable the element.

100. // Reattach behaviors, if they were detached in beforeSerialize().
101. // Get information from the response. If it is not there, default to
102. // our presets.
103. // We don't know what response.data contains: it might be a string of text
104. // without HTML, so don't rely on jQuery correctly interpreting
105. // $(response.data) as new HTML rather than a CSS selector. Also, if
106. // response.data contains top-level text nodes, they get lost with either
107. // $(response.data) or $('').replaceWith(response.data).
108. // For legacy reasons, the effects processing code assumes that new_content
109. // consists of a single top-level element. Also, it has not been
110. // sufficiently tested whether attachBehaviors() can be successfully called
111. // with a context object that includes top-level text nodes. However, to
112. // give developers full control of the HTML appearing in the page, and to
113. // enable Ajax content to be inserted in places where DIV elements are not
114. // allowed (e.g., within TABLE, TR, and SPAN parents), we check if the new
115. // content satisfies the requirement of a single top-level element, and
116. // only use the container DIV created above when it doesn't. For more
117. // information, please see http://drupal.org/node/736066.
118. // If removing content from the wrapper, detach behaviors first.
119. // Add the new content to the page.
120. // Immediately hide the new content if we're using any effects.
121. // Determine which effect to use and what content will receive the
122. // effect, then show the new content.
123. // Attach all JavaScript behaviors to the new content, if it was successfully
124. // added to the page, this if statement allows #ajax['wrapper'] to be
125. // optional.
126. // Apply any settings from the returned JSON if available.
127. // :even and :odd are reversed because jQuery counts from 0 and
128. // we count from 1, so we're out of sync.

    * @param trigger
    *   A string containing what's causing the behaviors to be detached. The

- * possible triggers are:
 - * - unload: (default) The context element is being removed from the DOM.
 - * - move: The element is about to be moved within the DOM (for example, during a tabledrag row swap). After the move is completed, Drupal.attachBehaviors() is called, so that the behavior can undo whatever it did in response to the move. Many behaviors won't need to do anything simply in response to the element being moved, but because IFRAME elements reload their "src" when being moved within the DOM, behaviors bound to IFRAME elements (like WYSIWYG editors) may need to take some action.
 - * - serialize: When an Ajax form is submitted, this is called with the form as the context. This provides every behavior within the form an opportunity to ensure that the field elements have correct content in them before the form is serialized. The canonical use-case is so that WYSIWYG editors can update the hidden textarea to which they are bound.

Appendix (Check Descriptions)

Possible PHP Source Code Disclosure (1384)

Summary

A serious vulnerability in the web application has been detected due to the presence of publicly available PHP source code. Obtaining PHP source code on a system allows an attacker to view the logic of the script and extract extremely useful information such as code bugs or logins and passwords. Recommendations include removing this script from the web server and moving it to a location not accessible from the Internet.

Fix

For Development:

This problem usually occurs when an administrator or developer makes changes to a script and saves the old one with a guessable extension such as .old, .bak, or .bak. Take pains to ensure that you are not inadvertently leaving source code publicly available via your web application as these files can provide attackers with a treasure trove of useful information.

For Security Operations:

A common characteristic of a secure web application is a clean webroot. The more clutter that fills a webroot, the higher the chance that a piece of information that might be of value to an attacker has been overlooked. The following recommendations will help to ensure that you are maintaining a secure web application.

- Webroot Security Policy: Implement a security policy that prohibits backing up source code in the webroot.
- Cleanup Script: Create a script that periodically deletes common backup files (.old, .bak, .tmp, .old, .arc, .orig, .backup, and so on) from your webroot.
- Temporary Files: Many tools and html editors automatically create temporary file or backup files in your web root. Be careful when editing files on a production server that you are not inadvertently leaving a backup or temporary copy of that file in the webroot.

For QA:

From a QA security perspective, it is a good idea before the product is released to see what files are available via the webroot. Has source code been left in backup files or otherwise archived in a manner which would allow public access? Are there text files that contain notes or other information best kept confidential? Remember, a successful attack upon your web application will almost always involve many pieces of information gathered from disparate points within your web application.

HTTP Basic Logins Sent Over Unencrypted Connection (10512)

Summary

Any area of a web application that possibly contains sensitive information or access to privileged functionality such as remote site administration functionality should utilize SSL or another form of encryption to prevent login information from being sniffed or otherwise intercepted or stolen. <http://www.lupinfoundation.co:80/stats/> has failed this policy. Recommendations include ensuring that sensitive areas of your web application have proper encryption protocols in place to prevent login information and other data that could be helpful to an attacker from being intercepted.

Implication

An attacker who exploited this design vulnerability would be able to utilize the information to escalate their method of attack, possibly leading to impersonation of a legitimate user, the theft of proprietary data, or execution of actions not intended by the application developers.

Fix

For Security Operations:

Ensure that sensitive areas of your web application have proper encryption protocols in place to prevent login information and other data that could be helpful to an attacker from being intercepted.

For Development:

Ensure that sensitive areas of your web application have proper encryption protocols in place to prevent login information and other data that could be helpful to an attacker from being intercepted.

For QA:

Test the application not only from the perspective of a normal user, but also from the perspective of a malicious one.

Possible Server Path Disclosure (unix) (810)

Summary

A minor vulnerability has been discovered within your web application due to the the presence of a fully qualified path name to the root of your system. This most often occurs in context of an error being produced by the web application. Fully qualified server path names allow an attacker to know the file system structure of the web server, which is a baseline for many other types of attacks to be successful. Recommendations include adopting a consistent error handling scheme and mechanism that prevents fully qualified path names from being displayed.

Execution

To verify the issue, click the 'HTTP Response' button on the properties view and review the highlighted areas to determine the Unix path found.

Fix

For Development:

Don't display fully qualified pathnames as part of error or informational messages. At the least, fully qualified pathnames can provide an attacker with important information about the architecture of web application.

For Security Operations:

The following recommendations will help to ensure that a potential attacker is not deriving valuable information from any error message that is presented.

- Uniform Error Codes: Ensure that you are not inadvertently supplying information to an attacker via the use of inconsistent or "conflicting" error messages. For instance, don't reveal unintended information by utilizing error messages such as Access Denied, which will also let an attacker know that the file he seeks actually exists. Have consistent terminology for files and folders that do exist, do not exist, and which have read access denied.
- Informational Error Messages: Ensure that error messages do not reveal too much information. Complete or partial paths, variable and file names, row and column names in tables, and specific database errors should never be revealed to the end user. Remember, an attacker will gather as much information as possible, and then add pieces of seemingly innocuous information together to craft a method of attack.
- Proper Error Handling: Utilize generic error pages and error handling logic to inform end users of potential problems. Do not provide system information or other data that could be utilized by an attacker when orchestrating an attack.

For QA:

In reality, simple testing can usually determine how your web application will react to different input errors. More expansive testing must be conducted to cause internal errors to gauge the reaction of the site.

The best course of action for QA associates to take is to ensure that the error handling scheme is consistent. Do you receive a different type of error for a file that does not exist as opposed to a file that does? Are phrases like "Permission Denied" utilized which could reveal the existence of a file to an attacker? It is often a seemingly innocuous piece of information that provides an attacker with the means to discover something else which he can then utilize when conducting an attack.

Robots.txt Access Control Information Disclosure (839)

Summary

Robots.txt is a file that system administrators place on web servers that instructs automated crawling engines such as Google and Altavista to not index or crawl certain portions of the site, usually because they would cause the site's web applications to malfunction, or because they contain sensitive information or applications that should not be displayed in search engine results.

Execution

<http://www.lupinfoundation.co:80/robots.txt>

Implication

An attacker can use the information in the robots.txt file to determine where sensitive or "hidden" application or information is on the site.

Fix

If robots.txt is not needed, then remove it. If the file is needed, then ensure that it does not contain the locations of hidden or sensitive applications.

Documentation Directories (10218)

Summary

Directory Enumeration vulnerabilities were discovered within your web application. Risks associated with an attacker discovering a directory on your application server depend upon what type of directory is discovered, and what types of files are contained within it. The primary threat, other than accessing files containing sensitive information, is that an attacker can utilize the information discovered in that directory to perform other types of attacks. Recommendations include restricting access to important directories or files by adopting a "need to know" requirement for both the document and server root, and turning off features such as Automatic Directory Listings that provide information that could be utilized by an attacker when formulating or conducting an attack.

Fix

For Security Operations:

You should evaluate the production requirements for the found directory. If the directory is not required for production operation, then the directory and its contents should be removed or restricted by a server access control mechanism. More information about implementing access control schemes can be found in the References. Automatic directory indexing should also be disabled, if applicable.

For Development:

This problem will be resolved by the web application server administrator. In general, do not rely on 'hidden' directories within the web root that can contain sensitive resources or web applications. Assume an attacker knows about the existence of all directories and files on your web site, and protect them with proper access controls.

For QA:

This problem will be resolved by the web application server administrator.

Common Documentation Text Files (10342)*Summary

A documentation file was found. The danger in having a documentation file available is that it reveals to attackers what type of software you are using and often the specific version information, or a location from where the attacker could download the software itself. Recommendations include removing this file from the production server.

Execution

Open a web browser and navigate to <http://www.lupinfoundation.co:80/LICENSE.txt>.

Implication

The disclosed documentation may aid an attacker in attacking the server and application.

Fix*For Security Operations:

Remove documentation files from all web accessible locations, or restrict access to the files via access control mechanisms.

For Development:

Have Security Operations remove this file from the production server.

For QA:

Have Security Operations remove this file from the production server.

"Admin" Directory (10810)*Summary

A directory named 'admin' was discovered within your web application. Risks associated with an attacker discovering an administrative directory on your application server typically include the potential for the attacker to use the administrative applications to affect the operations of the web site. Recommendations include restricting access to important directories or files by adopting a "need to know" requirement for both the document and server root, and turning off features such as Automatic Directory Listings that provide information that could be utilized by an attacker when formulating or conducting an attack.

Implication

Administrative directories typically contain applications capable of changing the configuration of the running software; an attacker who gains access to an administrative application can drastically affect the operation of the web site.

Fix*For Security Operations:

You should evaluate the production requirements for the found directory. If the directory is not required for production operation, then the directory and its contents should be removed or restricted by a server access control mechanism. More information about implementing access control schemes can be found in the References. Automatic directory indexing should also be disabled, if applicable.

Possible Insecure Cryptographic Hash (MD Family) (10344)*Summary

A string of hexadecimal digits matching the length of a cryptographic hash from the MD family was detected. Cryptographic hashes are often used to protect passwords, session information, and other sensitive data. There are multiple hashing algorithms in the MD family. By far the most commonly used algorithm is MD5, though MD4 and MD2 are still used with various public key and digital certificate systems. There are known attacks against MD5, MD4, and MD2. These hashes are also susceptible to Rainbow table attacks unless the input is properly salted. As such the MD family of cryptographic hashing functions should not be considered secure and should only be used in certain situations.

Implication

Hashes produced by the MD family should only be used for short-lived uses where the hash and/or hashed data is not highly security sensitive, or for uses where uniqueness is not a critical requirement. MD Hashes should not be used for any type of long term application such as verifying the integrity of a file or for password storage.

Fix*For Development:

The application should only use cryptographically secure hashing algorithms, such as SHA-224, SHA-256, SHA-384, or SHA-512. Hashes representing sensitive data should be salted to reduce the effectiveness of rainbow tables.

For Security Operations:

Implement a security policy that precludes the use of MD5, MD4, or MD2 for cryptographic functionality.

For QA:

Make sure that the application is not relying on MD5, MD4, or MD2 for cryptographic functionality.
